JULY 2010 ANNOUNCEMENT

UIHI Library Now Online!

The Urban Indian Health Institute is pleased to announce the inception of the UIHI library. This online library is accessible through our website and is open to the general public to access information about urban Indian health. The library contains many resources, including a bibliographic catalog that contains records of UIHI's publications. To date, we have 109 UIHI published materials cataloged. You can also find useful links and resources to PubMed, the U.S. Census, and more.

Please browse and search through our catalog periodically as we continue to update resources and expand the library. Many of our materials are free public resources. Due to copyright laws, some materials are only available to UIHI staff members at this time. If your organization has any materials you would like to share and include in the library, please contact us.

The UIHI is excited to see the growth of this library, and hopes that it opens the door to better access to health information for urban Indian communities.

To access the UIHI library webpage, please visit <http://www.uihi.org/library/>.

If you have any questions, please email info@uihi.org.
