American Diabetes Association Diabetes Alert Day

The American Diabetes Association Alert Day is March 25, 2014. Diabetes Alert Day informs the American public about the seriousness of diabetes, particularly when diabetes is left undiagnosed or untreated. In observance of Diabetes Alert Day, the National Diabetes Education Program is encouraging people to take the Diabetes Risk Test and know their risk for type 2 diabetes.

Find more resources for Diabetes Alert Day on the National Diabetes Education Program and American Diabetes Association webpages. The American Diabetes Association Alert Day page also includes downloadable posters translated into six Native languages.

Center for Integrated Health Solutions Tools for Creating a Business Case for Integrated Care

The Substance Abuse and Health Services Administration - Health Resources Administration Center for Integrated Health Solutions (CIHS) has developed a series of tools to create the business case for integrated primary behavioral health care services. These tools are designed to help organizations share the value of integrated care with stakeholders and decision makers. These tools include a monograph explaining a suggested approach, an excel template to calculate costs and revenues in providing integrated services and other resources.
